Zion's Savings Bank to be Six Stories High

THE GOOD WORK BEING DONE,

The People's Equitable in their New Building —A Booming Plano Rusiness—Lots in Lake City—Business Briefs.

Zion's Saving's Bank company are doing themselves proud and doing a great thing for the town at the same time. At a meeting held recently, it was decided that their magnificent building now going up on the old Weil's corner should be extended another story towards the sky, making six stories instead of five as originally contemplated.

Crowds of people stand around the corner all day long watching and admiring the beautiful solid stonework of which the first story upward the work will be of red pressed brick with stone trimmings. Mr. Watson, who is an authority, says there is no such foundation in the city as that on which the stone work of this bank rests.

The power story just decided on will give the bank five floors of offices to rent, and they will have a perfectly equipped elevator running from top to bottom as there can be little question of their securing tensats. The three stores on the east from the corner have not yet been rented. Zion's bank, when completed, will be the highest as well as the handsomest building in the city. It will throw into strong contrast the deserted corner opposite; and the general feeling will be one of hope that that magnificent site will not much longer be reserved as a theatre bill-board. The plan of allowing purchusers a share in the profits is a popular one, and Mr. Langton states that they continue to hand out rebate checks to customers on purchases of from five cents to fifty dollars. They keep absolutely no ledger account, doing a strictly cash business, and not knowing what it is to create a bad debt. Mr. Langton states that one heavy source of their revenue is in their discounting their invoices, and in one month alone these discounts amounted to $2,800.

THE boys took a notion to have a little fun the other night, and with that object in view arranged for a muscular scance at Lake Park. The programme was a spargramme was a spargramme was a spargramme was a spargramme.

The moon, like many of the excursionists that night, was just getting over a full, and was a little absent in the region of the ab-domen. What then was left of it didn't help or hurt anything or anybody, to an alarming extent. Otherwise it was a beautiful night. The bovine frog gurgled forth his nocturnal aria in Asia Minor; the cricket chirruped merrily beneath the sleepers; the English sparrow, which never afters as long as there is any fruit left uneaten, chippered cheerily along the route; and all else, save the snorting of a narrow, contracted gauge engine, was sovereign and supreme silence as the train conveying the boys sped along toward the scene of the festivities, unless, perchance, we exclude the sounds of revelry emanating from the several deep.

Aithough it is well understood I am a great mimirer of pastimes, especially those in which the fellows playfully curom on each other's countenances with or without padding, I found some difficulty in getting the tip. The district attorney couldn't enlighten me any, neither could the governor, although they must have been on" for the reason that they got therelittle late, to be sure, but that may have been a miscalculation. It began to look blue. I had never missed a bruising bee here and didn't want to miss this one. In all of these controversies, here or elsewhere, my judgment as to the winner has never yet led me astray, the result of which has netimes been a few nimble dimes es-ping from their owners' pockets and finding a safe retreat in mine. At last a friend on Main street, who shall be nameless, said: "Hould yer whisht and foller m when yes see me light out." I did, and go

Arriving at the Park we found a ring pitched and everything as snugly fixed for business as possible. The pugs were diband and fit to fight for a monarch's ransom. One of them (Lover) was tall but broad, his opponent being short but slender. It was said that the former never had licked anybody, and before returning home to the east was determined to have himself witnessed as a winner. I thought when I

The mest wonderful pert of man, most diffi-cult part to comprehend, perhaps is the netrous system, which touches and controls every part of the body. Having its root in the brain, its trunk in the spine, and its branches extending into and throughout every muse. It is trunk in the spine, and its branches extending into and throughout every muse. It is the like and beatin or disease and death along its course. The brain socretes a nervous finid which is magnetic in its effects and influence. The magnetic firment travels along the nerves like electricity, from the roots of the hair to the tips of the singers, and through its telegraphic com-munication penetrates the whole system. When the mervous fluid is deficient, or when the nerves do not properly transmit it, weakness and dis-case is the inevitable result. Electricity, the wonder of the age, roots the disease from its stronghoid. It penetrates the secret ambush of disease and externminates it root and bratch. "Well, consider yourselves under arrest."

This kind of thing was getting tiresome. The impudent fellow in the crowd wanted to know if the judge and the cierk of the district court were along; also if Doc Sprague couldn't be made to show up, likewise Dam Cannibal, open venire andall the other adjuncts. These questions were considered disloyal and the questioner would doubtless have been ordered in irons if there had been any irons handy. I was so excited I could hardly tell whether I was at Lake Park Liberty Park or Parker's saloon, and possibly the conversation and incidents subsequent to the arrival of the reinforcements as related herein may be somewhat irregular. I am confident, however, that I am in danger of arrest and it makes me nervous to see the executive anywhere near, especially when it is considered that he is now acting with the presecuting attorney and marshal.
